The University of Minnesota Music-Theater Department is presenting the musical “Little Shop of Horrors”

By Elizabeth Tollefson on Wednesday, March 2, 2005

The University of Minnesota Music-Theater Department is presenting the musical “Little Shop of Horrors” Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, March 9, 10, and 11 at 8:00 p.m. in Kiehle Auditorium on the UMC Campus. Admission is $5 adults, $3 children and students, and $1 for UMC students except on Wednesday when UMC students are admitted free.

This two-act musical revolves around the character Seymour who works at a skid row flower shop. In order to promote business, Seymour purchases a new plant that for some reason has a magical power to attract customers. The only problem is that the plant eats blood in order to grow, and eventually is not satisfied by the few drops of blood Seymour is able to feed it by pricking his finger. The plant eventually turns into a man eating talking monster determined to take over the world.

The show also features Seymour’s girlfriend, Audrey, his boss, Mushnik, and the sadistic dentist, Orin, who loves pain. Also featured are three “street urchins,” Chiffon, Crystal, and Ronnette.
